Deep dive: Virtual Portfolio Review - Design

During this interview, we want to better understand your work and who you are as a designer. You'll present two projects that you feel best represent the strengths and skills you'll need to succeed in the role.

What we're looking for

Your work is so much more than the final product. How did you get there? Why did you make specific design choices? Taking us through your process allows us to see your vision for the work and helps us better understand how you solve problems. It's helpful to highlight how you approached the following:

- Overcoming challenges and obstacles throughout the design process
- Building relationships with stakeholders and cross-functional partners
- Generating ideas and influencing other people to gain buy-in for those ideas
- Incorporating empathy and maintaining a user-centered mindset
- Understanding the broader business and audience context of your work, as well as its impact
- Navigating complex or regulated problem spaces

If you worked on a project as part of a group, be sure to focus on your specific role and contributions rather than the efforts of other team members (think "I did..." over "we did...").

How to prepare

While it's not required, we highly recommend creating and sharing a presentation or slide deck. We suggest this format (versus demoing a portfolio website) because it helps bring the interviewer along and tell the story of your work.

Please structure each project walkthrough as a case study, but how you organize the rest of the presentation is up to you. That said, we often find it helpful to include these sections:

- Intro or "About Me"
- Agenda
- Project walkthroughs

We recommend allotting about 30 minutes for each case study walk through, with 20 minutes for showcasing your work and 10 minutes for discussion and questions.
